The Retractor System

Retractors are essential surgical instruments used to hold back underlying organs and tissues, providing better visibility and access to the surgical site.

Radical Cystectomy

Radical cystectomy is a major surgical procedure that involves the removal of the entire bladder and is commonly performed as a treatment for bladder cancer. In men, this procedure often includes the removal of the prostate and seminal vesicles, while in women, it may involve the removal of the uterus, ovaries, and part of the vagina. Post-surgery, patients require a new way to store and pass urine, which can involve creating an opening in the abdomen for urine to be expelled (urostomy) or constructing a new bladder from a section of the intestine.

Prostate Removal

It involves the removal of the prostate gland and nearby lymph nodes. Other treatments for prostate cancer.

Renal Transplantation

Renal transplantation is a surgical procedure to place a healthy kidney from a donor into a patient with end-stage kidney disease.
